Daily Intelligence.
SIR JOHN WILL NOT RESIGN

Cabinet Ministers Emphatically Deny the Statement

WILL LEAD UP TO THE ELECTION

"The Next Election I Will," says John Haggart, "I Will Be of the Government." Hon. J. P. Patterson has no knowledge of the statement.

St. Thomas, Dec. 7.—The despatch from here in the papers yesterday that Sir John Thompson was about to resign the Conservative leadership caused great surprise, to no more than to the ministers, who were left at night.

And yet the information came from a very reliable source and bore a strong air of probability. But the government gave it a straight denial before they left town. The party who gave the information still insists that it is so.

EMPHATICALLY DENIED.
Ministers Haggart and Patterson emphatically denied the statement.

Tilbury, Ont., Dec. 6.—The Ministers were emphatic and unequivocal in their repudiation of the statement attributed to them in the morning papers that Sir John Thompson had resigned the Premiership for a place among the law lords of old England, that he would be succeeded by Sir Charles Tupper, and that the general election would be looked for in March.

Dr. Thompson was just as earnest in his denial. He said that he had never heard of the statement, and that he had never heard of
the statement, and that he had never heard of
the statement.

Dr. Thompson declared that there was no truth in it. The statement had not been made by him or in his presence.

Dr. Thompson said that it was all chatter. He said that he had never heard of the statement, and that he had never heard of
the statement, and that he had never heard of
the statement.

Dr. Thompson said that he was anxious to get back to the work of the session.

At this evening's meeting Mr. Haggart supplemented what he had already said by stating that he had never heard of the statement, and that he had never heard of
the statement, and that he had never heard of
the statement.

"Whether there will be a general election," said the minister, "next March."
He said that he had never heard of the statement, and that he had never heard of
the statement, and that he had never heard of
the statement.

We will take the opportunity which suits us best in going to the country."

Dr. Thompson was to resign the Government and that Sir Charles Tupper was coming to the country. Mr. Haggart said that he had never heard of the statement, and that he had never heard of
the statement, and that he had never heard of
the statement.

He hoped to have the honor of lighting the next election under the leadership of the ablest man that ever guided the destiny of this country.

"It would be a misfortune," said Mr.
Haggart, "if Sir John Thompson were to resign. It would be a misfortune to the country that he should be deprived of the services of a man so rich in experience and so full of energy. I am sure that he would be a great asset to the Government. I am sure that he would be a great asset to the Government."

He said that he had never heard of the statement, and that he had never heard of
the statement, and that he had never heard of
the statement.

Why
Don't You Use
Surprise Soap?

It does away with hard work,
—don't blot or wash, but nor give them the usual hard rubbing.
(See the directions on the wrapper.)
It gives the whitest, sweetest, cleanest clothes after the wash.
It prevents wearing and tearing by harsh soaps and hard rubs.
It is light with Surprise Soap—the dirt drops out. Harmless to hands and finest fabrics.

A Man Made Happy.

GENTLEMEN.—For five years I had been a great sufferer with Dyspepsia; the pain in the back of my stomach was almost unbearable and it only a day to me. When I would go to bed I would have terrible dreams, and my life to me was a misery, as there was no rest or sleep.

But with the use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People, my life has been changed and I am a well man. I can assure you, my dear friends, that I am not exaggerating when I say that I am a well man.

MAURICE B. MAINT, General Merchant.

The great profits of the Montreal street railway were nearly $210,000 for one year.

There are a number of varieties of corn, and the one that is most common is the one that is most common.

We keep a large stock of all the best of the best of the best.

Do not destroy worms and expel them from children or adults use Dr. Lows Worm Expeller.

A man is generally happy when he tells you that he is poor to give.

There is a new horse.

GENTLEMEN.—I had your B. B. B. an excellent remedy for Headache and Dizziness. I have taken several bottles, but have no effect. I have taken three bottles of B. B. B. and have entirely cured. In fact I feel like a different person.

Miss E. L. Taylor, Holland, Man.

The flu that will keep you out of the Bible will keep you out of the Bible.

Do not delay in getting relief for the little boys. Mother's Own Worm Expeller is pleasant and sure cure. If you love your child why do you let it suffer when a remedy is so near at hand?

Waited for opportunities are usually more or less treated as the edge.

GENTLEMEN.—I can safely say that B. B. B. is a successful cure for Indigestion. I am a successful cure for Indigestion.

WHEN DOCTORS DISAGREE:

By DAVID WECHSLER.

CHAPTER I.—CONTINUED.

The doctor was not completely surprised and embarrassed. They stood speechless for some moments, then the girl said: "How terrible it is, Walter, to hear you called Doctor Phyllis!"

"I am hardly used to it myself," then he replied to silence again, and she said to him, "I am not a doctor, but I am a doctor."

"Then, thank you, Connie. I thought you would be that if I went you word."

"What is it? I must have been late yesterday, from Dr. Glade."

"Didn't you receive the notice I sent you from King?"

"No. I received nothing."

UNSOLICITED CIRCULATION PROOF

No more convincing proof of the veracity of the WEEKLY INTELLIGENCER as an advertising medium could be had, than the unsolicited verdict of the president of those factories, who naturally advertise at the annual meetings of their different societies in the paper most read in their respective districts. Their own factory advertisements were this season advertised in the WEEKLY INTELLIGENCER, whilst four were advertised in ALL

OTHER WEEKLIES in the city combine and three of the latter applied to the WEEKLY INTELLIGENCER as well, for ten factory meetings advertised WEEKLY in the WEEKLY INTELLIGENCER. Only one in all the other weeklies is factory combined. This is UNDESIRABLE PRO P. OF CIRCULATION, which should not lose sight of by advertisers when they offered GREAT SPACE in papers that are read.

The subjects of prayer for the week were read, Mrs. Swayze and Mrs. V. Cook leading to prayer, specially remembering the subjects. The reports for Auxiliaries and Mission Bands all showed progress and increasing interest in great work.

Mrs. (Dr.) Carman gave us a very interesting report of the G. B. Board Meeting, and received a cascade of thanks.

Miss Ohlholm's solo "Scatter seed all along your way" was much appreciated by all present.

Mrs. (Rev.) McCamus then read an interesting paper on Medical Missions. Mrs. (Rev.) Baker reported for the 'Extra Cent a Day Band' in connection with Bridge St. Auxiliary. The Band has 100 members and expects to have many more, as all the ladies have been seen or invited to join. After the collection had been taken the meeting closed by singing and prayer.

CANADA IN BRITAIN.
Our Special Cable on Dominion Affairs in London.
MR. GARDNER AND THE EMBARGO.

It is well known that the high rates formerly charged by the shipping companies for the carriage of goods to and from the Dominion have been reduced to a considerable extent. This is due to the fact that the shipping companies have been forced to reduce their rates in order to remain competitive with the rates charged by the Canadian government.

THE NEW PREMIER.

Opinions of the Press Upon the Selection of Hon. M. Bowell.

Mr. Bowell is a thoroughly capable strong politician. His judgment originally sound, has been ripened by long experience and an intimate acquaintance with public affairs. His fund of information is extensive and his grasp of the subject at hand is whatever topic may arise for study and discussion. Unsurpassed as an administrator he is also a most successful speaker.

Every other and publisher in the land will be glad to have Mr. Mackenzie Bowell for Premier, since for a time. On a servant more, he has brought to the ministerial office those practical and judicious habits which must be the basis of a great work. Therefore he discharged his duties with credit. His public appearance, while not brilliant, has been full of force and energy. Personally, too, he has been most successful in his work as ministerial corruption. He has been a most successful speaker.

Mr. Bowell is a man of the people, and his administration will be a success.

SANTA CLAUS

been made of India rubber, and motherly little Betty all the while putting on the supper and smiling demurely at them as if they were so many feline kittens.

All through supper and all through the going to bed it was just the same merry time. It is a wonder Roby and Essie did not giggle all night. But they did not. They just said their prayers, put their heads on their pillows, and the house was still.

Papa Ned and Betty sat in front of the cozy grate smiling lovingly at each other until it was quite certain that the little ones were sound asleep. Then Papa Ned could not keep still any longer, and he told Betty all about his good fortune—how he had received the extra five dollars, and how he had spent it on the poor little girl.

Of course Betty approved. It seemed to her that he had done the only thing he could do, and it certainly did look as if he had received the extra five dollars for purpose to make the little girl and Jamie know what a Christmas really could be like.

"And to think," said he, sleeping the vest-pocket gratefully, "that I could do so much and still have my twenty—my twenty—"

He felt in the vest-pocket he had so often slapped, and repeated, "my twenty" several times over. Then a serious look fell on his jolly face, and he felt in the other pocket, saying "my twenty" more slowly. Then a scared look took the place of the serene one, and he felt in both pockets at once.

Then he sprang to his feet and felt in his trousers-pockets; then in his coat-pockets; then in every one of his pockets; then he fell on his knees on the floor and began to search.

Betty asked for no explanation. She put the lamp on the floor and searched too. After a while Ned Joyce looked up and groaned.

"I must have given it to the little girl," "And you don't know where she lives?" asked Betty.

"No," said her father. "Oh, dear! But papa, maybe she'll be waiting for you on the corner where you left her."

"Maybe she will. She looked like a good girl," said Ned, more cheerfully. He put on his hat and coat and hurried out. He was gone an hour, and came back looking very dismal. "You would have believed jolly Ned Joyce could look so."

II.

The little brown house Ned Joyce lived in had been a country cottage once; but just such a difference between them as there was between the parts of the house they lived in. The lower story was broad and low and cheery-looking; so was Ned Joyce. The upper story, having a gable roof, was narrow and peaked and gave you an uncomfortable feeling of being full of sharp corners to bump against—for all the world like Job Skeens.

He was very tall and very lean. His neck was so long that it kept his head lifted high up above his coat collar; his wrists were long, and his hands were bony, and his laugh was thin, dry, and sarcastic—very different from jolly Ned's.

The Joyce had very little to do with Mr. Skeens. They had once asked him to take supper with them and afterward spend the evening, but his queer looks and awkward ways so puzzled and disturbed them that the experiment was never tried again.

Of course, then, you can believe he was not the man Ned Joyce would choose for a comforter in his trouble. And, in fact, he would not even have spoken to him about it, had it not so happened that he met him at the gate next morning as both were going to business.

"Well! You don't look happy this morning, Mr. Joyce," said Mr. Skeens, in his vinegary voice, seeming positively pleased to see his usually jolly neighbor looking dismal.

"I don't feel happy, either, Mr. Skeens," answered Ned, dolefully.

"Sickness in the family? eh?"

It seemed to Ned that Mr. Skeens asked this question with an air of pleased expectation, and, really, he felt like striking him for it. However, he restrained himself, and answered shortly:

"No, sir, thank you! we all are well."

With that he would have left Mr. Skeens, but that disagreeable fellow would not be left, and he so pestered Ned with his questions, that at last the poor fellow told him the whole story. Mr. Skeens listened with many a grimace, and when Ned was through, he exclaimed in his chuckling way:

"Why don't you draw some money out of the bank? You'll never see your twenty dollars again."

"I have no money in the bank," said Ned, sadly.

"Then you can't have any Christmas presents, eh?" suggested Mr. Skeens.

"Not unless I find my money," Ned replied.

A PRECIOUS HAMPER.

ST. BERNARD "BENMORE"

"Oh, you'll never find it!" said Mr. Skeens, adding with his most unpleasant laugh: "And your presents were all selected, too, eh?"

"They were, sir," said Ned, indignantly, "but I don't see anything in that to laugh at."

"Of course not—he-he—of course not. And you'll have to countermand the turkey, too?" And Mr. Skeens seemed positively to glow with pleasure.

"Good morning, sir," said Ned, warmly. "I couldn't laugh at any man's misfortune."

But Mr. Skeens laughed many times more that day, in his sarcastic style, as he sat in the dingy cellar, not far from Fulton street, where he kept a second-hand book-store. But finally something happened which made him chuckle with even greater delight.

Late in the afternoon a little girl came in and asked him if he had a copy of the "Arabian Nights."

"Yes," he replied; but he did not move to get it for her.

"May I see it?" she asked timidly. "Third shelf, fifth book," he said, pointing to the place.

She reached up, took the book down, and opened it.

"It hasn't any pictures," she said.

"I didn't say it had," said Mr. Skeens.

"I want one with pictures," she said.

"Fourth book further on, same shelf. Price, seventy-five cents," said the book-seller grimly, glancing at her over his spectacles.

"Oh, yes!" said the girl, opening the book. "I know Jamie would like this better."

These words were said to herself, but Mr. Skeens heard them; and in an instant he was out of his chair, staring hard at his little customer.

For her appearance and her mention of "Jamie" recalled Ned Joyce's story of that morning; and now, as she turned the leaves of the book, Mr. Skeens, looking closely at her, saw that she held in one hand a twenty-dollar bill.

"The very same girl, I'll wager!" he exclaimed under his breath; and, stepping forward, he peered down into her face and demanded:

"Didn't you get that twenty dollars last night from a little fat man?"

"Why—yes, sir," she faltered in a terrible fright. "I—I was going to watch for him to-night."

"Oh, to be sure! very likely—quite probable. What's your name?" he asked.

"Molly Findley, sir. I was going to—indeed, I was. Here is the dollar bill; he gave me this one and told me to buy the book. He dropped the other, and I didn't see it at first. Do you know him?"

"Know him? Indeed I do. Here, give me that money," he demanded. "Or no," he added, as Molly held back hesitatingly, yet alarmed, "tell me where you live. I'll see him and let him know where he can find his money." Mr. Skeens laid his long fingers on Molly's shoulder.

"You seem like an honest child," he said, "but I think, after all, I'd better shut up shop and go along with you to see if your story is true."

It was after he had been home with Molly and had returned to his cellar, that he gave way to his gloom.

"What luck!" he piped, in his thin voice, "for me to find his twenty dollars that night with Ned Joyce's twenty-dollar bill in his pocket. He knocked at the door, and then poked his head in to say, with a smile:

"Countermanded that turkey, yet?"

III.

Yes, Ned Joyce had countermanded that turkey. He had very bravely gone into the butcher-shop and said:

"George, I can't take that turkey—that sixteen-pounder, you—"

There he broke down, and, with a pathetic wave of his hand, rushed out into the street. He turned out of the bright avenue, but sounded almost hideous to him. And when a hollow, dismal sigh would slip out in spite of him, he would pass it off for a joke, and try to do it again in a sportive way.

These sighs, being an entirely new feature of their fun, pleased Roby and Essie mightily, and they took to sighing with great gusto.

All this was hard enough to bear, but it was as nothing compared to what followed when they were all seated at the table and the conversation turned upon Santa Claus, and what he was going to give them. This very topic was the one in which poor Ned with a groan, and plunged despairingly up the first dark street. He was afraid he would see the presents he had so long before selected.

When he reached the little brown house, he did not hurry boisterously in, as was his custom. He stopped and looked as if he would like to run away. Three times he put his hand on the gate before he could summon the courage to open it.

Oh, but it was dreadful when he got inside, and was seized by the expectant Roby and Essie for the usual frolic! Of course he could not spoil their fun, so he tumbled them and rolled them, and laughed laughs that passed current with the babies

AFTER MANY DAYS

"And to think that I was once in love with that scoundrel!"

The speaker, Mr. Battley, was walking leisurely along a sidewalk, as he way back to his home in the Temple from an earlier hour of the day.

Mr. Battley had never in his life been so contented. Twenty years ago, in his arduous appointment in law, which, as the fair sex, had, so to speak, set him in the most effective, and left him from that time quite impervious to the claims of the girl with whom he fell in love.

The girl with whom he fell in love, the daughter of a Cornish peasant, beautiful creature of name Minnie Trevor, whom while traveling on the western coast, his affection was returned, a young lady, in the most vices of devotion and constancy, however, interested, in the also wealthy aunt, who, on hearing pretty soon's engagement to a law barrister, carried down on a fortnight, and carried her off to her home on the Continent. It was not young Battley, however, who later, the contractor, and he became enamored of Minnie Trevor's aunt and all the people bag out, with the result that she was forced into throwing overboard and marrying the gifted vulgar.

Minnie Trevor's marriage with Pauline did not turn out very well. The latter was coarse, of evil and vicious, and by and fast manner of life made sad with his health and his fortune. His later years he was very in England, but spent most of his continental pleasure resort—early at Monte Carlo—until at 40, after he had effectively the bank of his own resources and pecuniary, a winding-up order made against him and he was the hands of the great official re- do.

He left his widow and one girl of seventeen years, penniless, and they had been on to return to England and seek relatives. As they would assistance to save her from a destiny she cast about in her mind of her friends would be likely and she ended by applying to her, William Battley.

He therefore wrote, making statement to visit her at her following afternoon, and went to at the time fixed.

"This is indeed good of you, Mr. Battley," had been the greeting as she rose to welcome with a clasped smile.

"Nay it is a pleasure to renew acquaintance of an old friend," said Mr. Battley, a little surprised. "You are very old friends, are you?"

"I know that I could trust that is why I have applied to you for advice in my dilemma."

"Um—was your husband's expected?" enquired Mr. Battley, attempting a conciliatory tone.

"Yes and no. Poor dear George been very ill for months, but he came, suddenly, I think, heavy losses toward the end of his life, and he died."

"He has left you but little, I stand?"

"Scarcely a shilling." (The woman again much affected, and she poked herkerchief into her eyes.) "Of course, of course, but I must do something, my dear."

"But—Mr. Battley, my daughter!"

"Is she here with you now?"

"Oh, yes, I could not bear to part from my darling. The separation must come soon, alas, Mr. Battley, for myself I mind. I can go out as companion, earn my own living by the labor hands, but Minnie—poor Minnie, so helpless, so beautiful—cannot bear to think of her subjected to the toil and ignominy of a domestic servant. It would kill her."

"Would none of her relatives be to live with them?" suggested C.

"Never!" she spoke, vehement her eyes flashed. "They have no help, and we would rather die than to them again. But—Mr. Battley, an ideal. I dare say you are that it is foolish and imprudent, but I desire nevertheless to suit your opinion."

"Yes," said Mr. Battley, smilingly.

"You see," continued the widow, "I am a poor creature, apart from my mind and perhaps worse to a beautiful child like my Minnie, who is a governess, the very circumstance of her sinking into the life would ruin utterly her chain of iron as a man of the world."

"Battley, and will not be so my frankness—of marrying her, if she could have one fair chance single season in town, I am quite that with her great beauty, her manner and many accounts she would—would—make a fine match."

"Mr. Battley, you have given me speaking in this harmless manner of so romantic a subject as love and marriage."

"Quite so," said Mr. Battley, "the widow, politically, a state which—well, I find it very difficult to mention to you, even to me, as you will not misunderstand it—" had always before had a great deal of joy.

"The widow, politically, a state which—well, I find it very difficult to mention to you, even to me, as you will not misunderstand it—"

"The widow, politically, a state which—well, I find it very difficult to mention to you, even to me, as you will not misunderstand it—"

THE WHISPERING WELL

That night, every mention of Santa Claus fell like a lump of lead on his heart.

It was a marvel how he lived through the days that came before Christmas without betraying himself to the babies. Betty would have had him stop pretending to be jolly with them, but he would not listen to such a thing.

Mr. Skeens was waiting at the gate the morning before Christmas when Ned came out of the house. If there had been any other way of getting out, Ned would have turned back; but that was the only way he kept on and tried to pass Mr. Skeens.

"No news of the money yet, eh?" said

"I'm going to have quite a party, and my rooms are a little small, you know. I suppose you won't mind letting me use your back room as a dining-room, eh?"

"You may have it."

"And I don't know much about cooking turkey," Mr. Skeens went on. "Do you suppose I could get your Betty, now, to cook mine for me, eh?"

There was a sudden flash in Ned's mild eyes, and he hesitated a moment. Then he said very gently:

"Yes, Betty will cook it for you."

Mr. Skeens's delight at this assent was so great as to be inexpressible for more than a minute. He went through so many of his awkward grins and gestures that the three children watching at the window began to feel very uncomfortable.

"My turkey's a big one," he said; "I'll agree to match that sixteen-pounder that you had to give up. I'll send the things home to-day."

Ned stared at him a moment, and then turned away.

He's just trying to make me feel as badly as he can," he thought.

But there was no need for such an attempt, for nothing Job Skeens might do could make poor Ned feel any worse. It was simply impossible to be more unhappy than was he that Christmas Eve and night.

He dreaded the coming of morning, when he should see the disappointment of the babies upon learning about Santa Claus—the Santa Claus from whom he himself had taught them to expect Christmas gifts—had passed them by.

But it made no difference how much he dreaded it, that morning would come just as morning always comes. And when it did come it found him fast asleep. He had felt so unhappy that he had not supposed he could sleep at all, but he did.

To be sure, his sleep did not do him much good, for he had the most harrowing dreams of Roby and Essie refusing to kiss him because he had deceived them about Santa Claus; and when, in his sorrow, he groaned dismally, it seemed as if those Almost anybody else would have refused, but Ned did not. He said, "Yes." Whereat Mr. Skeens grinned and went on:

"Not any," said Ned.

"Then, I suppose, you won't have much use for your kitchen to-morrow, eh?"

"No, sir," said Ned, mournfully.

"Of course not! Well, I thought I'd have a dinner-party to-morrow. Think of me having a dinner-party! And I thought that, seeing you had no turkey nor anything like a Christmas, you might let me have the use of your stove, eh?"

Mr. Skeens grinned and went on:

"Not any," said Ned.

"Then, I suppose, you won't have much use for your kitchen to-morrow, eh?"

"No, sir," said Ned, mournfully.

"Of course not! Well, I thought I'd have a dinner-party to-morrow. Think of me having a dinner-party! And I thought that, seeing you had no turkey nor anything like a Christmas, you might let me have the use of your stove, eh?"

precious babies mocked him in a series of the most awful groans he had ever heard in the midst of which sounded Job Skeens's jeering chuckle, pitched apallingly high, and prolonged into a sort of a shriek.

But just then he heard Betty's merry voice. "Oh, Poppy," she said, "do get up quick! The most wonderful thing has happened! Don't you hear Roby and Essie?"

"Why, to be sure. That's what I look for, Roby and Essie."

Now you can imagine the horror of the sounds he had heard in his dream; for Roby and Essie were performing with all their might and main, the one on a drum and the other on a tin horn.

"Very likely," said Betty; "but do come quick, Poppy."

"What is it?" asked Ned, staring as if he were not yet sure that he was awake.

"Oh, I can't tell you! You must come."

It would be useless—simply useless to try to describe what Ned Joyce felt or thought when he looked into the dining-room. And this you will not doubt when you know what he saw.

The room was literally piled with Christmas presents. Piled is the only word for it. It was just as if Santa Claus had emptied his bundles right into the room. And there were Roby and Essie, exactly as they had tumbled out of bed, prancing about from one thing to another, shrieking and squealing with delight, and all the time keeping up the drumming and horn-blowing as if they could not stop.

After Ned had vigorously rubbed his eyes, to make sure that he was awake, he turned to Betty and stared at her. She stared back.

"Well," gasped he, "where did they come from?"

"I don't know. I heard the children shouting and screaming, and came in here, and there they were with all these things. They say Santa Claus brought them; but they are truly meant for us, for here are our names on the bundles."

—oh, no! But they ought to be mentioned.

They began to arrive at half-past twelve. The bell rang, and the Joyce waited to let Mr. Skeens admit his guests. But the bell rang, and rang, and he did not come down; so Betty ran to the door, while Ned hurried off his apron and went into the dining-room to welcome the unexpectable Mr. Skeens's guests. "I want go away. I'll break the door down if you don't let me in. Indeed I will," shouted Ned.

There was so little doubt that Ned was in earnest, that Mr. Skeens said: "Don't be silly, then. Don't be silly."

"I want be silly," cried Ned.

that's just what he is—a skinny old Santa Claus!" he said.

Whereupon everybody but Mr. Skeens was horror-struck. "He seemed not to mind it at all, but spoke up at once."

"Of course," he said, "the chimneys are so small nowadays it has pulled me all out of shape getting down them."

Then he chuckled in his peculiar way, which somehow did not seem forbidding now; and he smiled at jolly Ned, and they both laughed—each in his own way—at Roby's innocent little joke.

After which they had dinner as quickly as ever Betty could serve it, for, come to find out, the guests were only Molly and Jamie and the Joyce. Of course, a plate was put on for Mr. Skeens, though he had not thought before of eating with them.

But, in the midst of the dinner, Ned suddenly abandoned his knife and fork, leaned back in his chair, and exclaimed: "I've a bone to pick with you, Mr. Skeens. How did those Christmas presents get into our rooms?"

At this question Mr. Skeens chuckled in his drollest way, and looking across the table at Ned, he drew a key from his pocket and said:

"Here's the key to your back room, sir." Ned laughed knowingly, and reached out to take it. But, suddenly checking himself, he withdrew his hand and said in a most hearty manner:

"No, thank you. Keep it, my good friend. Nobody's door is ever closed to Santa Claus!"

Do you know what the Joyce discovered? That Job Skeens, in spite of his queer looks and eccentric ways, was as tender-hearted and good—that is almost, not quite as good—as Popsy Joyce himself.

The Christmas Tree.

By WILL CARLETON,
Author of "Farm Ballads," etc.

WHERE grows the Christmas tree—
The green, deep-rooted Christmas tree?

By what brave toil, in what rich soil,
Can spring the blooming Christmas tree?
Is it from prairies broad and deep,
Where future harvests softly sleep,
And flocks of acres, far and free,
Lie level as a waveless sea?

Or is it where a breeze-kissed pine,
Between the lofty plumaged pines?
Or where sweet stealthy Languor roves
Among the Southland orange groves?
Or blooms it best 'mid city homes, [dances]
With Wealth's unnumbered spires and
Or is it where, through changeable day,
The mountain shadows creep and play,
And swift a gleaming sun-flood rides
Along the tall cliff's steeply-sided sides?

High grows the Christmas tree,
The sweet, love-planted Christmas tree—
Where'er extends the hand of friends;
Wherever heart-caressings be.

What bears the Christmas tree—
The bright, rich fruited Christmas tree?
What gather they, expectant-gay,
Who throng around the Christmas tree?

Leaves picked by love-instructed art
From off the branches of the heart;
Fruits culled from every tree and vine
Where rephers fly and sunbeams shine,
White'er can brighten to our gaze
The trembling dawn of childhood days,
White'er can feed more clear and high
The flame of youth's expectant eye,
White'er can make more richly good
The blood of man or womanhood,
Or hid old age look smiling round
At gems of earth-joy newly found:

My life has love and help for yours,
Rich grows the Christmas tree—
The heart-protected Christmas tree—
With tokens dear that bring more near
God's lent love to you and me.

A LOVERS' TIPP.

try it over again if I had the chance. I have made some sad mistakes, but the second time I might make sadder ones. If I could take my experience back with me to boyhood, if I could start at ten or twelve with all or even part of the lessons learned that I have spent all these years in learning, then I would gladly try it over again. I know that I should avoid many serious errors, that I should make much more of life the second time. It is idle for me to think of that; that can not be. But I believe that we are placed together as we are, in families and in society, the old and the young together, in order that the experience of those who are older may be of use to those who are younger.

Suppose that I have been climbing a certain mountain. The paths are blind and wholly unfamiliar to me, and I must with several missteps, losing my way more than once, and having to retrace my steps, but succeeding, at length, in gaining the summit. On my return, at the foot of the mountain I meet you, and some such conversation as this takes place:

"Hullo! Going up the mountain?"

"Yes, sir."

"Ever climbed it?"

"No, sir."

"Don't know the road then?"

"No, but I guess I'll find it easy enough. Lots of people have found the way up, and without hesitation. Well, those of us who are a little older have been up the mountain of life ahead of you, and we have got out of the path now and then, and have learned a great deal, by bitter experience, about right turnings and wrong turnings, about swamps and thickets and pitfalls and precipices; and we sometimes feel very anxious to give you, who are now on your way up, a few hints from our own experience—warnings and directions that we know would be of use to you. And, though boys are sometimes headstrong and conceited, and they they know a great deal more about the road than their fathers and uncles and grandfathers ever knew, yet most of them are sometimes willing to hear what we have to say, and are thankful to be told. I believe that you are willing, and therefore, I have stopped you for a few minutes at the foot of the mountain, to tell you some of the walks that I would take, and going by canal from Schenectady to Syracuse. On the canal-boat a kindly gentleman was talking to me one day, and I mentioned the fact that I had crossed the Connecticut River at Albany. How I got it in my head that it was the Connecticut River I do not know, for I knew my geography very well then; but in some unaccountable way I had it fixed in my mind that the river at Albany was the Connecticut, and I called it so.

"Why," said the gentleman, that is the Hudson River."

"On no, sir!" I replied, politely, but firmly. "You're mistaken. That is the Connecticut River."

The gentleman smiled and said no more. I was not much in the habit, I think, of contradicting my elders; but in this matter, I was perfectly sure that I was right, and so I thought it my duty to correct the gentleman's geography. I felt rather sorry for and some of the roads that I would take if I were going up again.

"If, then, I were a boy again, and knew what I know now, I would not be quite so positive in my opinions as I used to be. Boys generally think that they are very certain about many things. A boy of fifteen is a great deal more sure of what he thinks he knows than is a man of fifty. You ask the boy a question and he will answer you right up, and down; he knows all about it. As a man of large experience and ripe wisdom the same question, and he will say, 'Well, there is much to be said about it. I am inclined, on the whole, to think so and so, but other intelligent men think otherwise.'"

When I was eight years old I travelled from Central Massachusetts to Western New York, crossing the river at Albany, him that he should be so ignorant. One day, after I reached home, I was looking over my route on the map, and lo! there was Albany standing on the Hudson River, a hundred miles from the Connecticut. Then I did not feel half so sorry for the gentleman's ignorance as I did for my own. I never told anybody that story until I wrote it down on these pages the other day; but I have thought of it a thousand times, and always with a blush for my boldness. Nor was it the only time that I was perfectly sure of things that really were not so. It is hard for a boy to learn that he may be mistaken; but, unless he is a fool, he learns it after a while. The sooner he finds it out, the better for him.

"If I were a boy, I would not think that I and the boys of my time were exceptions to the general rule—a new kind of

"I'm sure I can."

"Oh, yes, you'll find it, I hope. Though, for that matter, a great many people have missed it too. But look here! I can tell you something. You keep right on this path, and by and by you'll come to a big boulder, and then the path divides; the one that goes to the left looks the best and the most direct, but it isn't; I tried it and it landed me in a swamp in which I came near being stuck. The right road, then, is the right road."

"All right! Thank you! I'll remember that."

"Then just above, half a mile or so, there's a big spruce-tree across the path; there you must turn to the left. I went off to the right and was lost in the woods, and it was two hours before I found my way back."

"Thank you! Big spruce-tree across the path; turn to the left. I'll remember."

"Yes. And then, when you come to a spring, a mile or so further on—a spring at the root of a beech-tree—don't go straight on past the spring, as the path seems to lead you; turn, there, sharp up the bank. It will be something of a scramble, but you will strike a better path than that will take you up to a view of the South Valley, that they all say is the finest view on the mountains. I missed it, but you don't want to."

"No! of course not! Much obliged. Good-morning!"

"Good-morning!"

"Such talk as that would be sensible enough, would it not? You would not object in the least to having me give you points, in that way, about the best path up the mountain. You would take my word

"No," he answered.

"Very well," I said; "I'll use them, then, some time."

"You're welcome to them," was his reply. So that is where I got the hint out of which this article has grown. I don't know what my friend said to his boys and girls; no doubt it was sensible and kindly counsel; but he has given me a good handle for my talk (and for a talk, as well as for a tool, a handle is sometimes very important), and I have given him these few words of acknowledgment as a royalty on his invention.

But I must get to work, or you may think that the tool that I have fitted to this handle is going to be an anger. I suppose that there is not a man alive who ever was a boy, nor any woman neither, who never was a boy (no, not any girl, for that matter), who is not often thinking (and speaking out the thought, too, very often) of what he or she would do if he or she were a boy. Men often wish that they were boys. There was a song I used to hear them sing: "I would I were a Boy again!"

"That feeling comes over most men very strongly, now and then. And the reason why men sometimes wish that they were boys again is, I suppose, that they see many mistakes that they made when they were boys, and think that if they could try it over again, they could do better—that they would shun some of the errors that have marred their lives. But, then, if they were boys again, they would be nothing but boys, just as liable to make mistakes the second time as the first, just as ignorant, and just as headstrong. And, for my part, after soberly thinking the matter over, I have come to the conclusion that I would not

CARPETS

GEO. RITCHIE & CO.

We carry the largest stock of Carpets, Curtains, Oilcloths, Floor Rugs, Matting, Window Shades, Curtain Poles, and House Furnishing Goods of all kinds between Toronto and Montreal. We devote one whole flat and part of another of our large store to this department, and keep two experienced men who devote their whole attention to this department. This gives us a distinct advantage over smaller dealers who make Carpets only a side line.

The Style of our Carpets

It is now 38 years since we first began to handle Carpets, and our long experience and familiarity with the different grades and qualities of Carpets enables us to select only the best makes and choicest colorings and designs. While ladies like to make choice from a large assortment, still the styles and colorings must be up to date in every particular. We pay special attention to having the colorings of our Curtains, Rugs and General Furnishings blend harmoniously with our Carpets.

The Price of our Carpets

The large quantity of Carpets that we annually import enables us to get to the very bottom as to price. We avoid paying any middlemen profits by sending a buyer twice each year direct to the manufacturers, and by paying Cash get the very lowest prices from the makers themselves.

We are prepared to substantiate our claims to superior qualities and choice styles by submitting our Carpets and House Furnishings in competition with any house in Canada.

Agents for "Crossley's" Celebrated Carpets.

Geo. Ritchie & Co. BELLEVILLE

We deny it!

While it isn't true that we are selling groceries for less than cost, we are coming very close to the other side of the cost mark in our price. We want to get rich, of course, but we're satisfied to do it slowly. Small profits satisfy us.

We make a specialty of Teas, Coffees, Sugars, both staple and fancy Groceries

We are still selling the renowned Tower brand of black tea at 50c.; also 4 lbs. Valencia raisins for 25c.; also a 35c. Japan at 25c. We sell nothing but Redpath's Standard Sugars.

OSLER A POSSIBILITY.

B. B. Osler Mentioned As Minister of Justice.

MR BOWELL TO STAY IN THE SENATE

Hon. Mr. Haggart Working in Harmony with the New Frontier These Members, It is Said, Have Offered to Give Way to Mr. Bowell Should He Decide to Sit in the Commons.

Anticipated in Finding a Seat for Mr. Osler Should He Be Offered and Accept the Postoffice.

Ottawa, Dec. 16.—Nothing new or startling has developed in the political situation, and things remain pretty much as they were on Friday night.

There was a long conference of the late Ministry in the Council Chamber yesterday, the result of which was not yet known.

Hon. John Dufferin had a long conference with Hon. Mackenzie Bowell in the latter's room in the Russell House last night, and rumor has it that the Hon. John is working in harmony with the new Premier.

Chris. Hunter, arrived this morning. He said to a friend that he was on his way to Montreal, and that "dropped in" to see how things were getting on in Ottawa.

He is reported to have expressed himself very much in favor of Mr. Bowell and in very different style from what the Mail has been saying.

KISS BY THE QUEEN.

Affection Between Her Majesty and Mrs. Thompson.

London, Dec. 16.—Mrs. Thompson, the daughter of the late Sir John Thompson, accompanied by Senator Stedman and Mrs. Stedman, visited Her Majesty yesterday by command of the Queen. They were received by Colonel J. Clarke, Esq., in the waiting room.

He conducted them to the room where the late Sir John Thompson was seated as a member of the Privy Council, and in that apartment the Canadian visitors were received in audience by Her Majesty. Her Majesty was deeply sympathetic, drew Mrs. Thompson toward her and kissed her affectionately on both cheeks, like a mother, and expressed her deep and sincere personal remembrance of Sir John Thompson. The scene was most touching. The guests afterwards visited, by the desire of the Queen, the Mausoleum at Frogmore, to which they were conducted by the Queen's Yeomen.

Montreal's Practical Sympathy.

Montreal, Dec. 16.—Contributions to the national fund in aid of Lady Thompson and family are coming in freely, and the fund is now in the hands of the Bank of Montreal. The fund has been started with a donation of $2500 from W. W. Valin.

BRITISH POLITICAL CRISIS.

General Elections May Be Brought on at Once.

HARCOURT NOW RULES THE ROOST

Lord Rosebery's Speech of the Continental Record—He Said He Was Anxious to Retire From the Premiership—Recognition of the History Booked on an Imminent Harcourt's Cause of Discontent.

New York, Dec. 16.—The Sun's London says: Several persons who are charged with the management of the political situation in the general election manifesto to be issued by the Government within a week, that a crisis of some sort in the administration of the cabinet was quite certain. It is no longer denied that a certain section of the cabinet have an immediate appeal to the country.

Reports of Harcourt's defection continue to make serious division in the Liberal party. Lord Rosebery was tonight's speech by crisis of "War of Harcourt."

It is not publicly known here that Lord Rosebery made a private visit to Harcourt, but it is said that the two men spent the night discussing the situation.

The impression is gaining ground that Harcourt is anxious to retire from the premiership. This is obvious from the first importance in British politics may be to the next few days.

BELLEVILLE, MONDAY, DEC. 17.

CITY AND DISTRICT.

City Council to-night.

Christmas a week from to-morrow.

The day is one more clear of ice.

Merchants say trade was good on Saturday.

Flags at half-mast will furnish a melancholy memento of the late Premier.

Uzile's Countess, a prostitute, was sent up for six months on Monday.

Richard Walsh found a purse containing a small amount of money this morning.

The Amateur Minstrels have received a flattering offer to go to Peterborough and give a performance.

Donation two weeks from to-day, and not a man has publicly committed himself as a candidate for aldermanhood.

The police are busy to-day getting out and serving summonses for the many persons connected with the Clapper row.

Do not miss for any cause to hear Mrs. French-Sheldon to-night in the opera house or you will afterwards much regret it.

Rheumatism is primarily caused by acidity of the blood. Hood's Sarsaparilla cures the blood, and thus cures the disease.

Michael Sullivan, of Sidney, left a can of honey in the opera house, which was found by fish police, which will greatly strengthen the structure.

The footbridge is being repaired to-day. The joints in the railing are being strengthened by fish police, which will greatly strengthen the structure.

Chambers Ashley, hater of marriage licenses, Division Clerk of the Pinnacle street at residence over Benson's store.

Adolph Berggren, for kidnapping passengers some weeks ago, was this morning fined $50 and $2.50 costs payable forthwith, in default 30 days.

"Hello there, look, where are you going?" "Oh, up to Jake Finkle's to get some of his mixed cures, that is selling in one pound boxes at 14 cents."

If you are thinking of getting a hanging lamp for yourself or a present for a friend, look in at Clarke's drug store. We have a nice assortment and very cheap.

A trunk, which had been left at the train at the Pinnacle St. station of the Grand Junction, was found by the police on Saturday. It has the name "Blanche Robinson" on it.

Beautiful hand-made emeralds, XXX material throughout, from which select, latest design, at lowest prices. The best place in the city for repairing. Call and see us before buying. J. Orr, Jeweller, Carriage Factory.

The Canadian Bank of Commerce will receive subscriptions towards the fund for the family of the late Right Hon. Sir J. S. D. Thompson and will forward the amounts received to Hon. G. A. Foster, Ottawa, Treasurer of the fund, free of charge.

Mrs. French-Sheldon, who will appear to-night in the opera house, will give a reading reception. She was known to fame in the literary world years before her marvellous expedition to the Arctic.

It will be of interest to learn that she is a direct lineal descendant of Sir Isaac Newton.

Singers, public speakers, actors, actresses, teachers, preachers, and all who are liable to overtax and irritate the vocal organs, find in Ayer's Cherry Festival sale, certain and speedy relief. A timely dose of this preparation has prevented many a throat trouble.

In the southeast corner of the Kingston, Ont., Xmas a general store was given to the description of the Kingston Business College, of which J. A. Sawyer, late of Belleville, Ont., has recently become proprietor. This makes a strong team and will doubtless succeed—Fleming's Art Journal, for Dec.

PROBABILITIES.—For Dec. 17, a strong westerly wind, mostly fair, colder weather, local snow flurries.

Died.—At his late residence, 1111 St. John St., on Dec. 16, 1894, at the age of 74 years, James, beloved wife of Marshall Fink.

Lane's Medicine Moves!—Chas. Bowles, 1000 York St., in order to be healthy this is necessary.

DISCUSSING EARL JERSEY'S REPORT.

Inter-Continental Traffic May Get On, But Little Possibility of British-Colonial Trade.

London, Dec. 19.—The report of the Earl of Jersey, who has been the principal topic of conversation in the House of Commons since his return from his mission to the United States, has been the subject of much discussion in the House of Commons.

The Earl's report, which was read in the House of Commons, was a very interesting one, and it was generally well received.

MR. BOWELL'S CAREER.

Thirty years Ago He was the Broad-Minded Man He Is Today.

Whether also may be said of the Hon. Mackenzie Bowell, that he is not a bowler. It is thought by some that he will experience much difficulty in securing the support of the French element of the Conservative because of his attitude in regard to the Orange constitution.

It may be instructive, therefore, to examine his record in that respect. The high school of Orangeism, treated and honored by the order as no man ever had before him in North America, was the very cause of his political career. He proved himself a man of high character and high ability in the Orange constitution.

When asked in 1881 by the Conservative convention of that riding to become its candidate for election to Parliament, he did so with a clear understanding that the extreme views expected to adopt the extreme views on current questions which were held by a very numerous body of the Orange element of the district. To this element the proposed incorporation of certain Roman Catholics into the Orange constitution was a fearful, and seemed fraught with danger to the liberties of Protestants.

It was the policy of such men as Charles and David Crooks, many of whom were in the Orange constitution, and who, with Sir John Macdonald, that if the Conservative party, but that they were not so proven by subsequent developments. They to the Orange constitution with the family and have not been seen by their friends since. Their father was the door of the house to call them on Tuesday morning; they did not answer, and when he opened the door and saw the bodies of the two young men and taken all their clothing with them. The father was greatly shocked and at once went to the nearest neighbors to inquire if they had seen anything of them, but no one could give him any clue to their whereabouts. The girls have disappeared, and Lawrence came over to see if his children were here, but they were not at any of the places he inquired at. Mr. Lawrence searched all day yesterday without success, and returned to his home last night almost despondent.

The only hint of their movement the father obtained was from the girls' clothing, which was found in the morning. He has gone to Ontario today to hope that they may be with relatives there.

It is said that the step-mother had been severe in her treatment of the girls lately than usual, and to this is attributed their sudden departure.

Some people suggest the idea that the young ladies ran away with two young men, but this finds no credence among those who know them best, as they had never kept company with gentlemen.

It is even suspected that the girls may have ended their lives in the city.

Miss Anne Walton, who has been seriously ill, is now recovering.

Mr. Geo. Bagen is making good progress towards recovery.

Mr. Alex. Embury has returned from Quebec City, where he has been visiting.

Mrs. Jas. McShane, of Montreal, is the guest of her sister, Mrs. John T. Ward.

Mrs. W. H. Dingle of this city is visiting her parents, Col. and Mrs. C. B. Dingle.

H. W. Collier, R. Segal, Mich., and Jas. Gleason, Montreal, are registered at the Hoffman.

Mr. B. G. Gough, of Lindsay, is returning to his home in the city.

BISMARCK'S BEREAVEMENT.
 Prince Bismarck is Much Affected by the Loss, and His Physician Fears it
 Will Have an Unfavorable Effect
 Upon Him.
 Johanna Friedrike Charlotte Eleanore
 Von Bismarck was born on April 1
 1824, of a noble Pomeranian family.
 Her father, Heinrich Ernst Jacob von Puttkamer, of Viarhnen, belonged to the ancient family of Lords of the Manor
 Von Schlawe, Von Ragowwalde and

Counts of Newenburg and Tanchenberg, who since the fourteenth century, have ranked among the most powerful of the nobles of the North German Empire.

Prince Bismarck first made her acquaintance at the house of his friend, Prince von Blankenburg, a well-known leader of the Conservative party in the Prussian House of Delegates and an intimate while on a journey to the Rhine, on the occasion of accompanying Bismarck's father, in 1840, to the Blomberg estate. In 1846, when the acquaintance began, Bismarck was 22 years of age, and his future wife, and they were married though not without some opposition on the part of his father, in 1847. Prince Bismarck from his wild student habits, had a man of very uncertain future. He was a man of great energy, but of no great thing but a promising character, as is shown by the fact that he was elected apparently no thought of applying himself to a serious career.

At the age of 23, he left their wedding tour and then set up housekeeping in the old quiet stone mansion of the Bismarcks, at Schonhausen, in the province of provincial home. Here, where his and only daughter, Marie Elizabeth, who was born on August 21, 1840, in Berlin. Her father, Heinrich Ferdinand, was born in Berlin on December 29, 1840, and died in Frankfurt-on-the-Main, N. Germany, on April 1, 1890. Throughout life the Princess was devoted to her mother, who was a perfect specimen of the German hausfrau—very quiet, here and there a touch of the mother of the year, but honors as the most natural thing in the world. Her father was a very simple, very humble man and had but one great object in life—to make her husband a happy man.

Although she took comparative little part in political and court life, and was not very well acquainted with the influence over her husband, who is said to have repudiated her, she was devoted to have reached much faith in her judgment. Of Prince Bismarck's profligate and dissipated life she was a stout defender, and it is said that her angry denunciation of the present Emperor was the only thing that saved him from being promptly repudiated to the object of rankling her. She was a very simple, very uneducated, but a very well-to-do, and a very well-satisfied potentate. The affection existing between herself and her husband was very strong, and deep, and her death

Silver Wedding Presents.—An interesting exhibition has been taking place in Copenhagen, the gift of the King and Queen to the Prince and Princess. They number nearly 100, and are of the most beautiful kind. Among the presents from royal courts are a beautiful silver epergne from the King and Queen of Denmark, the King and Queen of Greece, a costly brooch, studded with diamonds and pearls, from the King and Queen of Sardinia, a necklace of pearls; from the Czár and Czarina, a pair of diamond earrings; from the King and Queen of Prussia, a portrait; from the King and Queen of Sweden and Norway, gold egg cups; from the King and Queen of Holland, a painting of the Princess Louise in her bonnet; from Prince and Princess of Wales, a pair of diamond tiaras; from the Crown Prince of Sweden and Norway, a pair of diamond earrings; from the Crown Prince and Princess of Denmark, a pair of crown candlesticks; from Prince and Princess Bernadotte, a cigar case; from the Prince and Princess of Monaco, a bracelet of brilliants and rubies from the Prince and Princess of Serbia, a collar vase in rococo from the Duchess of Anhalt, a silver service from the Prince and Princess of Prussia.

Marie of Anhalt; a silver box from the Duke and Duchess de Chartres, and a number of minor articles from other royal personages. The present of the Prince to his consort is a full-size portrait of their eldest daughter by Prince de Bache, and that of the Princess to her husband a heart-shaped shield with medallion portraits of their children, surrounded by the names of the children, painted by the artist Sallou. The children, the Crown Prince and Princess, presented their parents with three vases of silver, but the Princess Louise, in addition, gave a water-color painting by her of Amalienborg palace, the home, with the guards parading. The French Government sent a costly por-

13. Never allow dust or mud to lie on the surface of the roads, for either will double the cost of maintenance.
14. Recollect that dust becomes at the first shower, and that mud for the first shower will be a filthy condition for weeks at a time instead of allowing it to dry in a few days.
15. Remember that the middle of road should always be a little higher than the sides, so that it may lead into the side gutters at a little.
16. Never allow the water-tanks to be empty, and to be clear the whole year through.
17. While all of the above rules are being carried out, the principles of good road administration in Spain, especially for roads should be attained to the 14 and 15, as upon the success of these two rules, the success of the others will be measure the usefulness of all Macra and Telford roads. Yet how frequently do we see these best of roads rendered offensive by the neglect of these simple principles. In too many instances the surface is allowed to become full of hard voidings and an accumulation of dirt and dust, are seldom scraped clean, and being constantly stirred up, the surface, which should be hard, smooth, and clean, becomes foul with a sticky, mud two or three inches deep.

from the ground, and it must have a broad, firm foundation that is at least as long as it is wide. At any given time, if it is to remain useful, it must be able to hold its own for a lengthy time. The illustration shows a side view of the actual use, and is a very simple and true, lengthwise strip of 8 x 4 inch bedded timbers, the timbers are laid on the ground, the broader these rocks the more firmly established the bed. Crosswise the timbers are laid strips of 4 x 4 inch stuff just the width of the walk upon which the timbers are laid. A side view should never be laid with cross planks. Such a walk is a mistake. The timbers are laid in a circle around the nail holes and soon each individual plank will fly up if one of the timbers is pulled out. To secure a smooth walk with cross planking. As to the planks, it is better to use a 2 x 4 than a 2 x 6. It is inclined to splinter. Let the plank be run through a planer to make the top all of one piece. The timbers will prove satisfactory in use and will last.

A pretty and convenient match holder is made of two clay pipes glued, a little, finely-woven Chinese or Japanese basket set between them and the place by satin ribbons finished in pretty bow. Place in the basket a sugar glass to hold the matches, and hang by satin ribbons attached to the outside of the basket. About two yards ribbon will be required.
